

Cindy Beer

I grew up in Minnesota in a fishing, but not hunting family. I graduated from the University of Minnesota with a Mechanical Engineering degree with an emphasis in heat transfer and thermodynamics. That started my career in the aerospace world. My friends all call me a “Rocket Scientist”. I helped start a small engineering software company in 1993. We were recently acquired by a large company specializing in simulation software. I got my first golden retriever as a pet in 1985. She came from a line of goldens with the kennel name Quartermoon. She was going to be my hiking companion. Her breeder was very impressed with her and suggested that I check out hunt tests. Note that I had never fired a gun, and certainly never thought about hunting. But that started my passion for hunting and goldens. Now 38 years later I have my 7th and 8th Quartermoon goldens. I work hard to train my dogs and allow them to reach their full potential as wonderful companions and hunting dogs. Everyone that buys a Quartermoon golden is welcome to join the group that trains every Sunday, year round. I love helping to bring all these new pups along on their path to being truly amazing hunting dogs.